Subject: Marrangaroo National Park

Hi,

To whom it may concern,

My son and I both hold a current firearms licence, are members of the SSAA, and we also hold a current NSW DPI licence to hunt in state forrests.

We live at Marrangaroo, NSW, and back onto the Marrangaroo National Park.

Being not permitted to hunt in this area is not right.

We understand that National Parks are essential for the protection of native flora and fauna.

The issue we have with no hunting in this National Park is the countless amounts of foxes, that are also protected here.

There numbers have been increasing rapidly over the past few years.

They are now roaming free around residential areas every evening.

We have identified a large number of dens this year.

How is this allowed to happen ?

I believe we, responsible, law abiding hunters, should be able to eradicate these pests with the permission of the same body ( NPWS) who are meant to be protecting the flora and fauna in the park.

Hopefully soon we all can have the right to be part of the protection solution. I don't understand why this cannot happen using a similar process that we currently use with NSW state forrest hunting access ?

Regards,
