AS your "Official" submission site does not work, I wonder why< maybe I can have my say this way???>

Dear Sir/Madam,

I have been across this issue since the late 1970's. Nothing positive has happened since then that has made any difference to the problem of pests causing an inordinate amount of damage and cost to the environment and the primary producer. In fact the problem has got worse. If as much money and effort had been put into the destruction of the main pest species has has been wasted on time consuming gab fests and reviews like this one then we would have no problem at the moment. It has always been the attitude of NSW Parks and Wildlife and such self interested bodies that all hunters, who have the most expertise in the field of hunting these pests, are rednecks and should be kept out of National Park and other public space at all cost. Can you imagine how much egg these shiny arsed do nothings would have on their faces if the hunters did the job, mainly for nothing, after all these years of the "officials" making excuses and pushing the problem down the track to keep themselves in a job. I note that one body is making an effort to use the free resource provided by hunters even if they are making it impossibly hard to attend their information sessions. I would love to have egg on my face, put there by this review doing anything to solve our pest species problem.

Yours very sincerely

W J Warriner
